

ABSTRACT

[0002] A computer system includes a panel that when unfolded may expose a keyboard and a stand. The stand is to support the computer system in its upright position. The keyboard may be a wireless keyboard and may be part of a keyboard tray. When the panel is unfolded, the keyboard may be slid into or out of the stand. When the keyboard is slid into the stand, the keyboard tray and the stand form the panel. When the panel is folded, a carrying handle may be used to carry the computer system from one place to another place.